At a minimum, the report shall specify, for each target high school in which a fast college fast jobs education program operates:
 - (a) The number of students in each of grades nine through twelve and in the fifth year who are participating in the fast college fast jobs education program;
 - (b) The number of students who left the fast college fast jobs education program in the preceding school year and the reasons for leaving the program; and

In addition, the department shall post the summary report on its web site.

Summary Report

Even though the Fast College Fast Jobs Program was available to 23 school districts and 2 Boards of Cooperative Educational Services serving 62 target schools, only 1 school district, Denver Public Schools, chose to participate in the program.

During FY2007-08, three schools participated from Denver Public Schools, with 393 9^{th} grade students participating in the program. There were 255 students remaining in the program as 10^{th} grade students in FY2008-09, a 65% retention rate in the program. Tables below indicate the reasons students exited from the program.

Other districts that were eligible to participate chose to take advantage of the Postsecondary Enrollment Options Act rather than to participate in the Fast College Fast Jobs program. On May 10, 2007, the State Board of Education repealed the rule prohibiting 5th year programs. As long as students have not completed their high school graduation requirements, it is believed students can continue as a 12th grade student and participate in Postsecondary Enrollment Options. This option does not reduce the districts' per pupil funding based on the number of course credit hours as required by Fast College Fast Jobs.

2008-2009 Fast College Fast Jobs Qualitative Report

All questions in this report were provided by Vody Hermann, Assistant Commissioner, Public School Finance at the Colorado Department of Education.

1. What have you changed in year two implementation?

In year one, Denver Public Schools created a document, titled Intent to Participate (attachment 1), for ninth grade students involved in the program. In year two, the document was modified slightly to accommodate lessons learned from year one implementation. In addition, program coordinators have attempted to host a parent night each semester for parents of program-involved students. In so doing, coordinators discovered that it is difficult to attract parents to the event, particularly with a first-generation college-bound population of students.

2. Are the remaining students on target to reach their goals?

A number of students has left the program due to their falling below the minimum 2.0 GPA requirement. Ninth grade is a difficult year for students, even for higher-performing, college-bound students. In addition, during year two, coordinators experienced many scheduling conflicts for students who were enrolling in their first college class this semester. Despite these difficulties, the students who remain in the program are on track to reach their goals.

3. What types of course study are the students pursuing?

Please see the attached document, titled Fast College Fast Jobs Curricular Chart (attachment 2). At this point, all students are pursuing classes that will award them a general Associates Degree. We anticipate that the students will begin to deviate from this path during the junior year, when many may choose to pursue a career and technical certificate.

4. Did exiting students take part in exit interviews? If so, what was learned?

We were not able to conduct exit interviews with students who left the program. This is an idea that will be pursued, however, particularly with students who exit the program after three or more years of participation.

5. Were the exiting students taking any college classes or were all of their courses high school classes?

All students who exited the program in 2008-2009 were taking part in high school classes only.

6. Were the exiting students required to enroll in more rigorous high school classes?

The graduation requirements present in the Denver Public Schools system are very strict. Therefore, all ninth grade students take the same course work regardless of the program in which they are enrolled. FCFJ students will not be able to deviate from the standard course of study until their junior year of high school.

7. Did counselors work with the exiting students throughout the year?

Counselors work with all students in the program in an attempt to keep their GPAs above the minimum required 2.0. All students who exited the program had been involved in conversations with their counselors, referred to tutoring services, and had taken part in other interventions prior to their leaving the FCFJ program.
